Floor Lamp 12101-1

The Jugendstil Family

As an example for the geometric Jugendstil this floor lamp perfectly shows the simple elegance of this style.

The frame is made from square-cut pipes of brass in a plainly polished finish. Atop the column sits a single opaque glass sphere housing the light bulb. This is another lovely motive typical for this type of Jugendstil approach.

As a playful detail multiple brass beads are set in the position of the constructional screws hiding them. This gives the lamp a romantic otherworldly demure.
